

M&T Bank Celebrates Grand Opening of New Boston Branch

Boylston Street location offers comprehensive and personalized banking services for individuals and small businesses

BOSTON, MA. – M&T Bank (NYSE:MTB) today announced the grand opening of a new full-service branch at 500 Boylston Street in Boston, reinforcing M&T's long-term commitment to the city and its mission to expand access to financial services for residents, families and small businesses.

The 2,500-square-foot branch offers teller service, a walk-up ATM, and private offices for financial consultations, supporting a wide range of needs including everyday transactions, mortgage assistance and small business support.

"M&T Bank is excited to officially open our doors on one of Boston's most iconic streets," said Jeff Carpenter, M&T Bank's Interim Regional President in Boston. "This marks another milestone in M&T's commitment to serve the Boston community and strengthens our ability to serve our customers at every step of their financial journey. We're here to support people, businesses and communities across Massachusetts by providing access to financial services that foster growth and opportunity."

As part of M&T Bank's long-term commitment to Boston, the M&T Charitable Foundation is donating $10,000 to Trinity Church to support Trinity Boston Connects, a tuition-free, out-of-school program that empowers middle and high school students. Support is offered through academic enrichment and support, cultural and career exploration and character and leadership development. This donation underscores the importance of investing in the communities that M&T serves and reinforcing its commitment to building stronger neighborhoods where every individual has the opportunity to thrive.

"We're grateful for M&T Bank's support and commitment to the City of Boston," said Charmane Higgins, Trinity Boston Connects Executive Director. The bank's contribution will help us continue to provide opportunities for Boston youth, ensuring they have the tools and confidence to succeed."
