M&T Bank Is Named Founding Bank of The Shed in Recognition of a Multi-Year Partnership Providing Major Support for Live Performance Commissions

NEW YORK, April 1, 2019 -- M&T Bank has been named the Founding Bank of The Shed, New York's new arts center dedicated to commissioning, developing and presenting new works across all disciplines, for all audiences. M&T will be the exclusive financial services sponsor. "We pride ourselves on providing a tailored approach to meeting the financial needs of our clients, and we are delighted that we could work hand-in-hand with The Shed to customize the financing needed to make their vision come to life. We look forward to supporting and experiencing the many inspiring and path-breaking new works of art that are sure to come."

"Our partnership with M&T has been a thoughtful and creative endeavor," said the Chairman of The Shed's Board of Directors Daniel L. Doctoroff. "They have been a nimble lender since we began our project in 2014 in their role as construction underwriter, and the continued support of M&T and its wealth management division, Wilmington Trust, has been a huge asset as we publicly debut this groundbreaking cultural institution."

M&T has long been one of the New York City area's leading commercial real estate lenders. As of December 31, 2018, M&T had New York City area commercial real estate loans of more than $8.7 billion. Recent commercial projects M&T provided financing for include the mixed-use redevelopment of the Domino Sugar Factory in Williamsburg by Two Trees Management, Extell Development Company's Brooklyn Point residential tower at City Point and Steiner NYC's development of Admirals Row in the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

"Supporting The Shed is important to us and to our clients. The arts are a driving force for us and for many of those who trust us in managing their wealth and structuring their charitable support for these great institutions. Artistic sponsorships are a great way for us to give back to our communities and the clients we serve," said Wilmington Trust Executive Vice President and Head of Wealth and Institutional Services, Doris Meister.
